

POSSES SEARCH COUNTRYSIDE FOR YOUTHFUL BANDIT

Thriller Bandit Wrecks Train And Make Trip Thru Cars

LOSSES OF FOLKS VARY

Two Women Passengers Are Seriously Hurt in The Crash

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 26—(INS) Poses today were searching the countryside for a youthful bandit who last night wrecked and robbed a crack Union Pacific passenger train three miles east of Cheyenne.

Two women passengers were seriously injured in the crash. Sixty other passengers were badly shaken up but escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The train was a Pacific coast thru train from Chicago. It was due to reach Cheyenne at 8:45, and would have picked up a Denver Pullman there. The locomotive passed over a rail loosened by the robber without mishap, dragging a plunging train behind it. The seven day coaches and Pullman cars left the rails and bumped along the ties, coming to a stop and leaning against an embankment along the right side of the right-of-way.

Members of the train crew raced both ways down the track, flagging trains which threatened to plow into the derailed cars.

Working alone in the manner of an old-west movie-thriller bandit, the young desperado went rapidly thru the train, took what was at hand and disappeared before most of the passengers realized what had happened.

Railroad officials were unable to make a reliable estimate of the loot. Passengers were reporting losses ranging from fifty-five cents to $150.

Climbing aboard the observation, the young hold-up passed up the aisle, commanding all who were awake to "Come on, dish it out shake it up. I'm busy." He spoke in a deep, rough voice, passengers said.

He appeared nervous and in a hurry and disappeared in a few moments. "I've got a wife and two kids at home and the railroad won't give me work," some of the women passengers quoted him as saying.

Meanwhile the engineer uncoupled the locomotive to keep it from being dragged from the rails and reported he robbery.

Sheriff G. H. Rumsa and all peace officers in Southern Wyoming, Northern Colorado and Western Kansas joined in a widespread manhunt.

The bandit was described as about 22 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighing about 125 pounds. He was thin, had brown eyes and light hair. He wore blue overalls.

Immediately after the wreck and robbery, passengers were taken into Cheyenne.

PLANE TALK

By HARRY A. SUTTON

22. Parachuting

Like the marine life-preserver, the parachute is a proven device for emergency life-saving. Present-day airplanes so infrequently develop structural or engine failures that the parachute's principal use has come to be only in training planes where student errors sometimes give rise to emergencies.

Strapped to the student, the ordinary type is used as a seat cushion when not in use. It is opened by the pull of a large circular handle (ring) attached to the end of the actuating cable (rip cord). Successful jumps have been made under 1,000 feet altitude but that is regarded as the minimum for safe descent.

When it is advisable to leave the plane, the machine's position determines the best way to emerge. If the plane is level, the jumper had best stand upright in the seat, place one foot on the edge of the cockpit and dive away from the plane. Sure that he is clear of the tail surfaces and that the opening folds of the chute will not foul, the rip-cord is pulled.

Parachutes should be frequently unpacked, aired and inspected.

PRESIDENT RESTS AND SEES ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Takes Breathing Spell From Business Conferences of Past Ten Days

MANY DEVELOPMENTS

By George R. Holmes
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Hoover took a breathing spell today from the business conferences which have occupied him almost exclusively for the past ten days, as he sought ways and means to overcome the depressing effect of a giddy stock market, and to insure a winter of good business.

Figuratively, Mr. Hoover leaned back in his chair and surveyed these accomplishments:

1. Federal and State governments are cooperating in the greatest public buildings and public improvement program ever attempted—a program that will call for the expenditure of well over $1,000,000,000.

2. Railroads have been energized to proceed with a billion dollar program of expansion and equipment improvement.

3. The utilities interests of the country have in the making expansion and improvement projects that will call for the expenditure of almost another billion during the next year.

4. The menace of strikes and extensive lay-offs has been removed by the promise of no wage-cutting and of labor leaders that there will be no wage agitation while the business situation is uncertain.

5. Agriculture, long a sore spot in the general business set-up, gives definite promise of getting more firmly on its feet than at any time since the post-war deflation period. The new farm legislation has had a vitalizing and steady effect, and grain prices are improving.

6. Money is easy and becoming easier, assuring ample credit facilities for business growth and expansion.

These are the high-lights of what has been accomplished since the acrobatics of the stock market sent shivers of apprehension down the spine of business, and held up to administration officials the bogey-man of "hard times."

BELL PHONE CO. TO SPEND HUGE SUM ON CONSTRUCTION

Program Calling for Expenditures of $44,000,000 in State-Wide Proportions

DECIDE ON INCREASE

Engineers Year Ago Decided To Spend Approximately $10,000,000 Less

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—A $44,000,000 construction program of State-wide proportions is planned by the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania for 1930, according to an announcement by Leonard H. Kinnard, president of the company.

This prospective expenditure represents an increase of $10,000,000 over the tentative construction budget for 1929 fixed by the company's engineers a year ago.

"Not only does our new 1930 budget exceed by $10,000,000 the earlier estimate for construction expenditures next year, but our plans call for a $215,000,000 telephone expansion program during the next five years," Mr. Kinnard said. "This new five-year construction budget exceeds by $50,000,000 the appropriation tentatively decided upon for this period when we considered the subject about a year ago."

"These upward revisions of our construction budgets for 1930 and the succeeding four years are evidence of our faith in our State and its prosperity."

Although a large portion of the Bell Company's 1930 appropriations will be devoted to extension of central office facilities, nearly one-third of the total will be spent on "outside plant." This constitutes the equipment and apparatus outside the central offices, including such items as poles, cross-arms and aerial and underground cables. In round figures the outside plant expenditure will be $16,200,000.

Approximately $8,750,000 of this amount will be spent for the construction of underground and storm-proof aerial cable. The magnitude of the cable construction program to be carried out in this State next year is shown by the fact that 685,000 miles of wire in storm-proof cable is scheduled for construction under the company's 1930 budget. These storm-proof cables are encased in lead and provide so great a degree of protection against adverse weather conditions that service interruptions due to storm conditions are reduced to a minimum. It is the policy of the Bell System to extend the use of storm-proof cables wherever the volume of business makes their installation economical.

Nearly $6,000,000 is to be spent for new building construction. This will include major additions to several existing offices and the construction of new offices throughout the State. Construction of two new central office buildings in Philadelphia, and the erection of a large new central office structure in Pittsburgh is called for in the company's building programs for the State's two largest cities.

Telephone engineers have estimated that there will be about 78,000 telephones added to the Bell network in this State during the year. In arriving at this net figure they predict that approximately 336,000 telephones will be installed and that about 258,000 will be disconnected because of the removal of subscribers to other neighborhoods or towns, and other causes.

The daily average of local telephone calls in the State during 1929 has been, on the basis of figures now available, 5,370,000. During 1930 it is estimated that local calls will total 5,730,000, an increase of 360,000 a day.

An average of 281,000 out-of-town calls was made daily by telephone users in Pennsylvania during 1929. This figure also will be increased, according to the estimates of telephone engineers, to 306,000 calls a day.

SCOUT CAMPAIGN IS ENDORSED BY A CONGRESSMAN

Henry W. Watson Praises The Effort to Put Scouts On Business Basis

THINKS IT FINE THING

Advance Gifts Committee Has Raised Total of Nearly $6,000.00

Congressman Henry W. Watson, today, sent an endorsement of the Boy Scout movement to Oscar O. Bean, chairman of the Publicity Committee of the current campaign for $53,000 for Council maintenance and camp improvements.

"Leaders in public and industrial life are endorsing the movement on all sides," said Mr. Bean. "It is very heartening to receive these expressions of approval from men like Mr. Watson."

THE ENDORSEMENT FOLLOWS:

"The age of wealth in which we now live contributes to ease and comfort, also enfeebls energy, the power of human activities. The youth of today seemingly meets with the spirit of the age. In order that the coming generation may have greater vigor of mind and body to recognize responsibility to their country, they should be trained mentally and physically. Camp life brings one nearer to nature, teaches self reliance, improves the health and disciplines the mind. Boy Scouts is an institution which might well be supported by every citizen. A nation cannot be greater than its people. Boys of today will tomorrow weaken or strengthen our Republic. May the Boy Scouts continue in their work and may the teaching of character be one of their outstanding features."

The county wide Advance Gift Committee, which is securing the large subscriptions for the Boy Scout Campaign, meets tomorrow evening at Brunner's Restaurant, Doylestown, for a report of work accomplished. The committee consists of 50 outstanding business and professional men of the county, and is headed by Thomas R. Stockham. This committee expects to raise $40,000 of the entire goal of $53,000. Senator Clarence J. Buckman will preside at the meeting.

Reports from the campaign central office at Doylestown indicate that nearly a quarter of the Advance Gift Goal has already been secured. Subscriptions actually turned in total nearly $6,000 with many more still in the hands of the workers. Of the total secured, $1,695 was from Area "A," Carl Wenzel, chairman; $1,385 from Area "B," Henry Palmer, chairman; $2,545 from Area "C," Thomas Ross, chairman; and $171 from Area "D," Mark Thatcher, chairman.

SIXTY-EIGHT BILLION

The total income of the American people last year is estimated at $68,000,000,000. Mere mention of such a vast income is bound to provoke in many quarters the query, "Where does the money go?" Within limits the statistician has answered the question.

Of the national income half went to retail stores, $18,000,000,000 went for food, tobacco and soft drinks, $750,000,000 was spent in barber shops, $2,000,000,000 was spent for automobiles and motor trucks, and more billions went for federal, state and local taxes and still more for the construction of homes and other buildings.

It has also been figured out that the average American each year spends $2.58 for diamonds, 22 cents for dentifrices, $4.15 for near beer, six cents for ink, $1.30 for pickles, $3 for ice cream, but only 70 cents for eggs, $3.75 for toilet soap, $1.10 for books, $27 for joy riding, $1.29 for religion, $5 for jewelry, 15 cents for art, 11 cents for health service, 65 cents for coffee, $10 for public schools, $1.85 for shirts, $45 for food luxuries, and eight cents for salaries for college professors.

On the strength of these figures persons contemplating going into business or entering a profession will avoid for financial reasons ink manufacture, book publishing, religion, college professorship, art and health service.

This American budget explains why the Russian communists and their many socialistic predecessors have never been able to sell their Utopian schemes to the American people.

BUSINESS IS SOUND

An orderly slackening in some of the major lines of industry is clearly evident, but it should not be viewed as a result of the collapse in the stock market. The failure of the basic industries to make their seasonal gains is accounted for by the exceptional rate of operations earlier in the year, which ended in overproduction.

Surplus stocks of goods might have found readier markets except that purchasing power was affected by various circumstances, such as uncertain agricultural conditions, the decline in building trades employment and the attraction of rising values in the stock market. In the fact, that it was the engagement of much money in security speculation and the rise rather than the decline in stocks that caused trouble. Had these funds been put into productive enterprise, employment would have been aided and purchasing power sustained.

Despite its retreat, business fully deserves the credit of being sound.

Where there is serious trouble it is in lines where there is overcrowding and surplus manufacturing capacity. But every setback in business has witnessed the introduction of products which swung their manufacturers into leading positions. Those producers or distributors are fortunate who have used energy and effort in times of prosperity to look ahead and analyze products and markets for the future. Into new projects the capital now released from speculation may go, with profit not only to its possessors but to the nation at large.

This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring Ted Lewis

SYNOPSIS
The Molnars, Victor, famous violinist and orchestra conductor, his wife and his son, Ted, have come to New York that Ted may start his career as a violinist with greater advantages. Lodged in humble quarters on Third Avenue, Ted forgets for the moment the beautiful lady on the first cabin deck of the steamer who had listened so intently to his playing to his fellow third cabin passengers, and makes off to the Ziegfeld Theatre to find his Hungarian sweetheart, Lena Schmidt, who had preceded the Molnars to New York and was a dancer with the show.

INSTALLMENT IV
Lena, his dear little blonde Lena, had as she would have expressed it, "given him the air!" There was no one now to whom he could turn in his loneliness—no friendly, happy days ahead. He would like to tell his parents, but how could he?

A radio blared forth a song—and into the dullness of his consciousness he realized it was the song Lena sang when he first saw her on the stage. Oh well, he would just have to take himself in hand—it would not be easy, but it must be. Gone were the rosy tinted dreams, plans and thoughts of that romance that built the straight white road through the lane of tall green trees to the shiny white house called "Happiness."

The days were spent in a feverish anxiety—going from office to office—waiting for elevators—climbing stairs—waiting for the "powers that be" only to be in-wait until next season to eat! He began to feel very miserable and that he was futile. He couldn't give up—his parents who were depending upon him, needed his help. As he walked along Broadway his feet felt like pieces of lead. Men, women, taxis, trucks, and trolleys all moved swiftly past him as strange and unreal as the figures in a hodge-podge nightmare of a dreamer. His senses usually so acute had become numb, and his head felt dizzy. He thought that he must beat his hands and scream to the smug complaisant people that he needed a job. He philosophized wearily to himself and half aloud—"Strange—we are thrust on this earth—we do not ask to come—we are forced to work—and then the way of earning it is made impossible—but it surely does not seem the right to earn it and the ways of doing so. My poor father—my poor little mother and—I—I am such a failure!"

This next would be his last call—at least for today—he was tired out—with the confusion and noise. It seemed he would never get there.

When at last he arrived at Abrams' office he had reached that condition which inevitably comes after long hours of effort expended futilely and great mental upheaval—the state of mind when nothing matters any more. He felt as if he just did not care whether he found employment here, but his conscience would bother him if he let this chance go by.

For the first time that afternoon, Ted did not have to wait for the man he wanted to see, but was ushered, immediately, into the private office.

He gave Mr. Abrams the card as well as one of his own.

"I'm very sorry, but—" Mr. Abrams rose fingering the card.

Ted interrupted him—"Listen, Mr. Abrams," he said earnestly and with great sincerity, "I've got to get a job. I used up all my money, and my parents are dependent upon me! I'm broke! I've walked the streets for five weeks."

Mr. Abrams lent a sympathetic ear—he had heard this story so many times. This poor struggling musician—all artists striving and making every effort to succeed but never doing so without that infernal period of trial and starvation. And the son of Victor Molnar—and Victor Molnar dependent on this boy. Inconceivable! The man had been the toast of the world only a few years back as the recognized genius of the violin.

"Now, my boy, I am going to give you a little advice—I know they all give you plenty of advice. But you follow mine, and I will reward you by finding you a good place to work in. This city is not interested in the great works of masters—unfortunately for New York and for you. They are jazz crazed. If you were Heifetz or Mischa Elman—you could sell your music and they would pay huge prices to hear you. But what you want to do to become successful in life, is to get busy and learn how to give the people what they want—and at the present time it is jazz music. Sell your fiddle, buy yourself a saxophone and in no time you can be packing houses, and your name will be universally known."

Ted walked sadly to the door—"Now you think over what I have said, and when you can blow a hot saxophone come back and see me—and I'll do something for you!"

Ted looked at Mr. Abrams. He must have misunderstood—or perhaps that was the name of the manufacturer of saxophones. These Americans—such a different language than the one he had been taught.

"Hot saxophone?" Ted asked mystified.

Mr. Abrams laughed as he answered, "Yes, red hot!" and patting Ted with fatherly affection he escorted him to the door.

The tenement flat that housed Ted's parents had taken on an entirely different aspect since they had moved in. Little personal effects here and there lent a "homey" atmosphere and despite the din and confusion the new city represented, the old couple began to regard it as home—at least as much of a home as their slim purses would permit. It was nothing, of course, like their home had been at Budapest—but then, they were trying hard to get the philosophical viewpoint. No luxuries, no servants, hardly enough, at times, to eat! But they were being made to see the truth of the old saying that went something to the effect—"You never know just what you can do until you have to!"

Mrs. Molnar moved restlessly around the room straightening whatever disorder she could unearth—a chair here, a "tidy" there and a magazine on the table. In a chair near the window sat Mr. Molnar reading a Hungarian newspaper, and from time to time discoursing at length on the items of interest to them it contained.

"When you can blow a hot saxophone, come back."

formed, after sitting impatiently for several minutes; panic in the soul, that the gentleman had gone for the day!

It was to the Philharmonic Symphony orchestra's offices that Ted turned his steps now. And a feeling of renewed hope made his steps lighter. If one wanted to succeed one could not afford to become discouraged, for when that happened one lost the power of controlling their destiny to a certain degree. "And after all," Ted thought to himself as he walked towards the offices—"the best thing, I have come to the conclusion, to do, is to keep kidding myself along. I will be miserable if I accept the literal facts of our situation here in this country; 'kidding myself' is just what I want to do—and shall continue to do. Life is only bearable that way—it keeps your feet out of the mud of bare reality and keeps them treading the clouds!"

He arrived at the offices of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra. After the usual wait of quite some minutes, he was ushered into the presence of the manager of that great organization.

"I will keep your name and address filed, and if anything should come up, I will get in touch with you," he said in answer to Ted's plea for a job.

"But—sir, I am sure I can qualify—I have studied under my father." "You are fortunate—your father was a great musician—we have a long waiting list—but—just a minute—I have a friend at the Metropolitan Opera."

The manager wrote on the back of one of his own cards—My dear Gatti: This is the son of the great Victor Molnar.

At the Metropolitan Opera House—the interview granted him was very short. The second manager simply informed him that no new men were needed until the next season.

"But I'll give you a card to a friend—"

On the card Ted read "Mr. Abrams, Theatrical Booking Office." He hurried to the address given on the card. His spirits had fallen considerably during the different interviews. Next season! Yes, probably next season he could work—but now was the time he really needed it—it was a long time to

KONJOLA ENDED FIVE YEARS OF COMPLICATIONS

Grateful Man Pays Fine Tribute to New and Different Medicine

MR. M. C. BOWSER

"For five years I was in poor health," said Mr. M. C. Bowser, of Echo, Pa. "Catarrh and constipation were the bane of my life. There was a constant ringing and buzzing noise in my head. Every day a splitting headache made me miserable. Constipation allowed poisons to gather in my system and made me tired and worn-out. I tried medicines and treatments but they were of no avail."

"I secured several bottles of Konjola and started the treatment. At last I knew I was on the right track—that health was just around the corner. When I completed the third bottle I felt so much better I hardly knew what to make of it. The catarrh had vanished and constipation was a thing of the past. Konjola has done wonders for me."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

"Twin Beds," said to be one of the funniest talking, singing and dancing pictures, has been booked by Manager Litto of the Riverside Theatre tonight, and tomorrow night, featuring Jack Mulhall and a strong supporting cast.

Mulhall is aided in the fun-making by a very clever cast, headed by Patsy Ruth Miller, and containing such names as Eddie Gribbon, Zasu Pitts, Knue Erickson, Be Hendricks, Jr., Jocelyn Lee, Nita Martan, Edythe Chapman, Armand Kaliz, Gertrude Astor and many others.

The picture was directed by A. Santell and is said to be one of the finest piloted by this successful director.

Mulhall has never appeared to better advantage than in this hilarious comedy, and it was chosen by First National officials as the ideal vehicle for his first starring picture. Paramount Sound News also will be shown those days, and a comedy, "Short Tale."

On Thanksgiving Day and next Friday "Hard to Get," a talking picture, with Dorothy Mackaill as the star, will be the feature. There will be a matinee Thanksgiving afternoon. A feature comedy Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in "Angora Love," also will be shown, and Paramount News.

GRAND THEATRE

That ancient but apt saying, "Truth is stranger than fiction," might well be applied to the screen career of Janet Gaynor, whose first talking picture role is that of a circus trapeze artist in F. W. Murnau's Fox Movietone production, "4 Devils," which comes to the Grand Theatre tonight and tomorrow.

Miss Gaynor's designation as a full-fledged luminary of the films was won by reason of her outstanding performances in such notable Fox productions as "Seventh Heaven," "Sunrise" and "Street Angel." Her rise from extra girl to foremost emotional actress of motion pictures has consumed actually only three years.

Miss Gaynor was born in Philadelphia and attended schools there, in Florida, Chicago and San Francisco, and began her screen career in Hollywood just four years ago. Among her first pictures for Fox were "The Johnstown Flood" and "The Return of Peter Grimm." In all, she has played in about a baker's dozen of pictures for Fox.

Janet is keenly interested in the new art of talking pictures. She believes she can express her highly distinctive talents far better in the dialog medium than in pantomime, as her voice is said by experts of the dialog technique to be naturally suited to the subtle requirements of Movietone.

Mary Duncan, Charles Morton, Barry Norton, Farrell MacDonald and Nancy Drexel compose the supporting cast of "4 Devils," and all are heard with Miss Gaynor on Fox Movietone.

On Thanksgiving Day there will be matinee and evening performances of Reginald Denny's talking film, "His Lucky Day," and four acts of vaudeville, together with other special features.

Camels have made smoking a national pleasure!

With years of steady growth behind them, Camels continue to grow. They are smoked today by more millions than ever before.

The increasing popularity of smoking in the United States exactly parallels the growth of Camel Cigarettes. Camel has given smokers a cigarette of genuine quality . . . a marvelous blend of choicest tobaccos . . . mild, fragrant, satisfying. This is the quality that smokers depend upon, and they can rest assured it will never be sacrificed. Taste in smoking, as the real pleasure of smoking is experienced, leads directly to Camel quality.
